PROCEEDS OF RED CROSS FAIR TO GO TO CONNELLSVILLE BRANCH; ENTENTE ARE BACK AT OLD LINES AFTER SIX WEEKS OF VICTORIES

SENTIMENT OF COMMUNITY STRONG AGAINST DIVISION WITH THE COUNTY CHAPTER

Staged as a Local Enterprise, by Local Talent and Supported by People of the Community, Faith With the Generous Donors Would be Broken by Diverting the Fund to Sections Having no Part in Raising It.

BRANCH HAS RIGHT TO IT UNDER THE RULES

That the money raised by the Red Cross street fair should remain in Connellsville to be expended by the local branch for the purpose for which such funds are authorized to be used, is the sentiment of the community, as expressed in no uncertain terms, by those who were most prominently identified with the entertainment which was the means of raising the splendid total, close to $15,000.

Having been organized and conducted as a purely Connellsville enterprise, and patronized freely by the people of the community with that understanding, it is held, and very decidedly, held, that a diversion of any part of the funds to the Fayette county chapter would be such a breach of faith with the supporters and workers of the local organization that they would ever afterward be lacking in enthusiasm and interest in any campaign to raise funds for Red Cross purposes.

T. J. Hooper, chairman of the Connellsville branch of the Red Cross, said this morning that he was not in favor of allowing the money to go to Uniontown after the people of Connellsville had worked so hard to raise it. "I believe I voice the sentiments of the majority of the executive committee," said Chairman Hooper. "I hope there is no one in Uniontown who would demand that the money go there and I don't believe there is any one in Connellsville who would advocate it."

"The regulations of the National Red Cross define a branch as a chapter in epitome. It has its own organization of a chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer and executive committee, having the same rights, privileges and duties as the corresponding officers in a chapter. A branch exercises within the territory assigned to it all the functions of a chapter. These very plainly include the raising of money by local enterprises and the expenditure of it. The only requirement placed upon branches in respect to finances is simply that an accounting shall be made to the chapter. It is no where prescribed that a branch shall turn over to the chapter treasury money that may be raised through purely local efforts."

"The Connellsville branch has an executive committee that has demonstrated ever since its organization that it is a body capable of conducting the affairs of the branch to the utmost satisfaction of those who have so generously given it their financial aid and moral support. The magnificent sum placed at the disposal of the branch by the patrons of the fair is proof of the confidence the community has in our splendid body of selfless and self-sacrificing Red Cross workers. I am therefore decidedly opposed to breaking faith with the fair patrons which would be done if any part of the money they donated were diverted outside of the district under the jurisdiction of the Connellsville branch and its auxiliaries."

Councilman M. B. Pryce, chairman of the street fair committee, is firm and unyielding in his determination that the Connellsville branch shall retain and use for its proper purposes every dollar of the money raised during the fair.

"You can say," Mr. Pryce told a courier reporter this morning, "that the finance committee positively will not consent to turning over any portion of this fund except for the sole and exclusive use of the Connellsville branch. When the street fair was proposed the announcement was made that it was to be a Connellsville fair, conducted by Connellsville people for the benefit of the Connellsville branch of the Red Cross."

"The people who made it the great success that it was worked with this idea in mind and the people who spent their money freely to insure its success had the same understanding. Had there been even the intimation that any part of the proceeds would be diverted to points outside of the Connellsville branch's district, there would not have been one-half the energy and effort put forth and no part of the enthusiasm displayed by the people that marked the fair from start to finish. To even suggest that the fund should be divided is a proposal so manifestly unfair that the people of this community simply will not stand for it. That is the attitude of the committee and you can rest assured that we are going to hold fast to every dollar the people so freely and generously gave in support of its local Red Cross organization."

WORKERS IN RED CROSS FAIR HOLD STREET PARADE

Success of Last Week's Big Street Event Celebrated Last Night.

WAR PAGEANT REPEATED

Thousands Gather at Library Lawn to Witness Beautiful Spectacle and Contribute Another $130 to the Red Cross Fund; Mayor Duggan Speaks.

In celebration of the wonderful success of the Red Cross street fair held here last week, a parade over the city was held last night, in which those who helped during the fair participated. At the close of the parade thousands witnessed the war pageant "Democracy Triumphant," given on the library lawn.

The pageant was given last night at the request of many persons who had not been able to attend it on Friday and Saturday nights, and also in order that the Red Cross fair workers, who had to remain in their booths on the other nights, could attend.

The parade started at the Macabees building shortly after 8 o'clock, going through the north end and to the West Side. It disbanded at the library lawn. The parade was led by the Connellsville Military band and the volunteer firemen. Members of council and the Red Cross fair committees followed. Company G was in line, followed by the Boy Scouts. The Leisengard band was next and then the Catholic cadets.

The "Girls of the Allied Nations" had a place at the head of the parade, dressed in their uniforms and the Red Cross workers brought up the rear.

At the library lawn, before the opening of the pageant Mayor John Duggan made a short address. "I want to thank the people of Connellsville for the spirit of democracy they have shown," he said. "You people have shown that you can be depended upon to the last man and woman to do your part to the nation. I am here to announce that every cent of the money raised by the fair goes to the Connellsville branch and not the Fayette County chapter." Ringing applause greeted this statement.

"It goes to the defeat of Von Hindenburg and that is where the people of Connellsville demand it shall go."

"The ladies of the Red Cross of Connellsville are the noblest and best women I have ever come across. If you go to the Red Cross work rooms you may not see many women up there, but go to their homes, and you will see where they are working day and night. The Connellsville women certainly are a noble part of this branch of the organization."

"There is more work to do with the Red Cross than there are workers to do it. Every woman in the city is wanted to go to the Red Cross rooms and help produce the goods for the boys in France."

After the pageant had been given, members of the Red Cross received contributions in two large bags, one at Fairview avenue and the other at Baldwin avenue. The total thrown in to both bags amounted to $189.

$925 FOR HONOR ROLL

Council Makes Appropriation for Temporary Tablet.

At a meeting of council last night, an appropriation of $925 for the purchase of an honor roll, which is to contain the names of the men from this city in the service, was made. The roll is being compiled by Rev. E. B. Burgess, who was recently appointed chairman of a committee to have charge of the military census.

Rev. Burgess was present at the meeting and told council he thought it more advisable to appropriate the money for the temporary roll than to raise it by subscription. The temporary roll will be erected until after the war, when a permanent tablet, probably of bronze will be erected.

Has Ribs Fractured.
Francis Emma Hicks of Cleveland, O. visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hicks at Dunbar, previous to leaving for Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., for military training. He is a brother of Mrs. R. S. Cooper of Dunbar.

Enters Military Training.

Smithfield Physician Wounded.
Dr. C. C. Ryan of Smithfield, now in France, received a slight wound in the thigh according to a telegram received yesterday by his wife.

Returns to Camp.
Foster Critchfield, attached to the Medical Supply company, left Sunday night for Newport News, Va., after spending a furlough at his home here.

MEDICAL DETACHMENT EATING FLAP-JACKS AND MOLASSES BACK LINES.

A "Carte Lettre" from Private Oliver P. Mosier Jr., of the 119th Regiment Medical Detachment, dated August 6, shows that the boys of this unit have no occasion to be down-hearted.

"As behind the lines," says the cheerful message, "eating flap-jacks, molasses and coffee and training rats. The sole occupants of the village I am in are two men, one old woman and three cats."

"We have everything we could wish for—plush furniture, lounging slippers, regular beds and lamps. Everything going fine. Don't worry."

"GOD BLESS THE WOMEN OF CONNELLSVILLE," IS WHAT THE BOYS WILL SAY

Chairman Pryce Gives Special Thanks to Every Person Contributing to the City's Big Success.

"I cannot find words to express my gratitude to all those hundreds of people who contributed to the grand success of our Red Cross fair and to this time I find it difficult to realize the wonder of our achievement. Almost everybody gave their assistance and support and worked in such harmony that more than a public acknowledgement of their services seems to be due them," says M. B. Pryce in a message of appreciation to the workers.

"As chairman of the Red Cross fair executive committee, I wish to thank the public generally for their most generous support of the fair. To the pastors of the various churches and to the ladies of the different congregations especially I wish to thank for their untiring efforts and wonderful work which contributed so much to our success; to the various committees who deserved their work and devoted days and nights in preparation of the fair program and saw that every detail was well carried out; to these men the entire community is indebted. The business men and merchants who donated so liberally to the various booths and attractions and who withstood so many inconveniences because of the blocking of the streets, I thank. I acknowledge with thanks the liberality of the news and the Courier for the unlimited space devoted to the advertising of the fair. To the West Penn Power company for their most liberal contribution of power and for the vast amount of labor they gave so willingly, I am thankful. To the Connellsville Military band, the Leisengard band, the Scottsdale band, the Dickerson Run Y. M. C. A. band, the Baltimore & Ohio band, and the Italian band I have the greatest admiration, and I wish to assure them that they added no small portion to the complete success of the fair. To Company G the Boy Scouts, and Catholic Cadets, is due the thanks of the entire community for their splendid cooperation."

DONATIONS STOLEN.

Articles Contributed Towards "Auction Block" Are Taken.

A number of donations including a satchel, valued at $15, a hand-painted plate, towards the "auction block" an attraction of the surgical dressing booths at the Red Cross fair, were taken as yet have not been located.

The articles were left at Herzberg's store for storage over night and during the night the store was broken into and the Red Cross donations, together with goods belonging to Mr. Herzberg were taken. For this reason the receipts from this attraction were not as large as expected.

TROUBLE IS, your system is clogged with a lot of impurities that your over-worked digestive and eliminative organs can't get rid of. Pills, oil, salts, calomel and ordinary laxatives, cathartics and purges only force the bowels and prod the liver.

It is not age that gives flavor to the Old Ale House. The legend on the rusty signboard which states that it was established by Mary McGillicutty in 1870 does not count for much in a city where many taverns can trace a direct lineage from the days of Penn.

It is rather the garment of tradition with which the old taproom has covered itself.

It was there that this and that heavyweight signed articles for an immortal bout. It was there that politicians hatched a celebrated deal about which newspaper editorials are still being written and public speeches still being made. It was there that many a young genius found the inspiration which changed him from a bohemian lack to a successful author.

Over it all "Mother" McGillicutty presided with discipline at once gentle and stern. The brawls were rare.

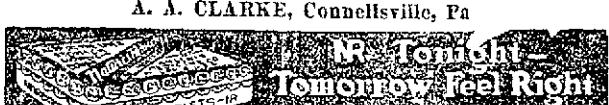

The Old Ale House is no less a landmark than a sight. The visitor is usually taken there in the early afternoon, and while he sips the ale from his mug the attentive guide recounts the history, adding a line or two from personal reminiscences. The Ale House seems to fit all moods and to attract a variety of minds. It is furnished in mosswood after the fashion of the English Inns of the eighteenth century, but that is as far as an attempt at atmosphere has been made.

And, what a relief!

High School Alumni Will Present Flag to the School.

CIVIC CLUB HOLDS MEETING

First Session After the Summer Vacation is Held; Drafts From District No. 7 Is Returned Home From Camp Lee; Other Notes of News.

Special to The Courier
SCOTTDALE, Sept. 10.—The committee from the high school class of '17 met at the home of Miss Ethel Collins and cut more stars for the flag they will present to high school.
The houses making service flags are crowded and cannot turn out any flag for some time so the committee decided to make its own flag. Room will be left on the flag for more stars representative of boys who will go when the 18 to 45 draft goes into effect. It is the desire of the class to get the flag completed at the earliest possible time so that it may be presented and hung from the study hall walls.

Uncle Sam Says:

A pledge to save is a pledge to fight.
I don't care whether you are a millionaire or a miner. This is the one year that you can't afford to waste one dollar.

Some "exclusive" shops and stores are going to charge fancy prices for women's wearing apparel this fall, and some folks are going to stand the "gaff" because they get in the habit of paying more than necessary before the war.

The person that wants to "do their bit" and can't go "over there" is going to puncture the false pride of paying for a fancy label when buying a fall garment, and save the difference to help the boys who are on the road to Berlin.

I am going to maintain my quality, and just as long as my present supply lasts will practically sell at last year's prices.

That will teach your dollars to have more seats.

Serbian Great Walkers.
All Serbian peasants are great walkers. A servant, given a short leave, will think nothing of foot it to his home, five and twenty miles off, and walking back after a short day spent with his family.

It is quite in the ordinary way of their business for both men and women to be two days on the road to market.

Owing to their remarkable marching powers Serbian troops are mobilized and moved with surprising rapidity, in spite of the great lack of railway communication. And then they march light.

With little in the bread-bag that hangs at his belt the Serbian soldier is quite content if only he can roll himself a cigarette now and then and look forward perhaps to a tot of plumcognac.

Palm Tree Has Long Life.
It requires about seven years to grow palms to the size necessary for good fan leaves and after that they furnish an annual crop indefinitely, the Chinese stating that the trees live for hundreds of years, producing their annual crop. An old tree will produce leaves as large as five feet in length with a breadth just above the lower end of perhaps three feet.

WE'll KEEP THE MONEY

It would appear that the Connellsville branch of the Red Cross has every right to retain and expend for proper Red Cross purposes every dollar raised by the street fair. Not alone the right arising from "getting and having," but all legal and proper right under the rules of the American Red Cross governing the organization and conduct of chapter branches.

"A branch," says these rules, "is practically a chapter in its scope and carries on all Red Cross activities within the territory assigned to its jurisdiction by the chapter." A branch has its own chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer and executive committee with the same rights, privilege and duties within the jurisdiction of the branch that the similar officers have within the jurisdiction of a chapter.

In their financial relations to the chapter, branches are not required to turn over to the chapter treasured funds that may be donated to or raised by or otherwise come into possession of the branches. They are required to give an accounting of all such funds, which mean that they must show whence the funds were received and to whom, and for what purpose they were paid out. In the rules governing branches the following are the only requirements with respect to funds:

"1.—The branch shall render a monthly financial statement to the chapter.

"2.—All donations of money received by a branch shall be accounted for to the chapter and by the chapter to the division manager. The chapter may permit its branches to retain donations designated for local purposes, provided that they are for proper Red Cross activities. Such donations shall, however, be accounted for to the chapter. Contributions received by a branch in response to an appeal for a special work of relief shall not be used for any other purpose."

These rules are simply applying to branches the general rule that applies to chapters which is that, "All money received shall be held in trust for the benefit of the American National Red Cross and subject to the rules and regulation of or specific authority granted by the said American National Red Cross." In other words branches just like chapters have the authority to retain and the privilege to use, and the obligation to account for funds coming into their possession. Such funds can be used only for "proper Red Cross activities" and must be definitely and accurately accounted for by the branch to the chapter and by the chapter to the division manager. When funds are dedicated to branch for "designated local purposes" the chapter may permit the branch to retain them and account for them in the usual way. If a branch makes an appeal for a special work of relief, the contributions received in answer to such an appeal can be used for no other purpose.

Germany Should Do Penance For 100 Years for Wrongs She Has Done to Humanity

(From Sermon Delivered in Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, by Rev. Mark A. Mathews of Seattle, Wash.)

Preceding the peace terms of the Allies, ten in number, the preacher gave what he called three preliminary suggestions. They were:

"Every peace proposal heretofore suggested has been German-made, regardless of the plaus or uniform lips or pens through which it has been filtered.

"There shall never be a negotiated peace, nor shall the insidious propaganda for a negotiated peace be considered.

"Germany shall be crushed and made to submit to terms of peace dictated to her by America and our Allies. The German people are just as much to blame as the Kaiser and his war lords. Therefore, there shall be no peace except that which follows absolute victory and the establishment of righteous dominion.

The peace terms proposed by the minister were:

"1. Germany shall not sit at the peace table. She has forfeited every right to sit at a table where gentleness of integrity and honor preside. She may watch the proceedings at the peace table from her seat in the cage of culprits.

"2. The peace table shall be preceded by the court-martial in order forever to prevent Germany or any other nation from committing outrages which Germany has committed. We must first ascertain from Germany the commanding officer in charge of the submarine at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania. He must be court-martialed and shot as a traitor to humanity and righteousness. It is a crime against humanity for a person to trade with an outlaw.

"3. Germany shall submit to a protectorate over her mind and conscience for an indefinite period—at least for 25 years, or until we have trained the mind of a new generation. Germany organized her present murderous mind through her universities. She must be saved from herself, and for the world's safety.

"4. Germany shall surrender her sword, demobilize her army and surrender her navy.

"5. Germany shall restore Belgium, repair every injury and make adequate financial compensation, for made to the public was not for a special work. It was to provide funds for the general work of the Red Cross, including the making of hospital garments and supplies, knitted garments and surgical dressings, and other activities, hence its expenditure is governed by the general rule relating to expenditures by chapters as well as branches which, to repeat, is simply that the money shall be used for "proper Red Cross activities" and accounted for to the chapter.

Any disposition of the funds realized by the street fair other than the use thereof by the Connellsville branch would meet with decided disfave among the promoters and patrons of the fair. The enterprise was started by local people as a local enterprise; its success was made possible by the liberality of the people of this vicinity, hence there would be very strong objection to making a distribution of the proceeds in sections of the county without the jurisdiction of the Connellsville branch which contributed nothing towards raising the funds. The members of the Connellsville branch joined with the members of all the branches in the county to put both National Red Cross drives across with willing acquiescence to the rule governing these drives, that a certain percentage of the subscriptions were to go to the national headquarters and the remainder to be divided pro rata among the subscribing communities having chapters or branches. The funds raised by the street fair were not subject to such a partition, but were intended for the use of the Connellsville branch and its auxiliaries alone.

It is with no desire to be selfish that Connellsville claims the right to all proceeds of the street fair, it merely asks for its own. We have every reason to believe that the promoters of this wonderfully successful enterprise would gladly help any neighboring community conduct a similar affair and ask or expect no recompense for their services or share in the proceeds, so earnest in their desire to promote every worthy project designed to aid the great American Red Cross. When putting the street fair across they had exactly the same purpose in view but they hold that, having raised the handsome sum netted by the fair for the use of the Connellsville branch, this organization should not be deprived of the privilege of expending the whole of this sum.

Unless our interpretation of the rules applying to such matters is wrong, the local branch and its auxiliaries will have that privilege. That will be exercised with credit and honor to the branch, and to the satisfaction of the donors of this splendid benefaction, in the confident expectation of every person who knows anything about the fidelity and consecration of the workers comprising the Connellsville branch and its efficient auxiliaries.

Germany's surging resistance to the Allies will only make harder the fall.

The Sunday parson says we are to have reward other than an approving conscience. Fuel Administrator Garfield announced that he intends to lower the price.

Thanksgiving proclamations are to the proper form of expression over the results of the Red Cross fair, although we note a strange absence of them from the columns of our Utown contemporaries.

Connellsville boys have been in the thick of the fray so much that they are beginning to feel sort of lonesome when there is nothing doing on their part. The appeal the Connellsville branch

REMARKABLE ADVANCE PRESENTATION

You may not be interested in the present conditions of the woolen market, but you should know the effect it is going to have on your winter clothing, suits, overcoats. The prices may be doubled before winter sets in, the demand for wool by the Government for uniforms has been so stupendous prices have advanced to heights undreamed of; tailors find it impossible to get a supply for love or money; we saw the conditions long ago and placed our orders for fall and winter clothing. Men's and boys' stocks are now in our stores, and while it may be a little early for your fall suit or overcoat, it is your annual time for outfitting the boys for school, but if you are so fortunate that the boys do not need a new suit now but will likely need one later, it would be policy to buy as early as possible—later goods are going to be higher and harder to get. In connection with the men's and boys' clothing, suits, overcoats, trousers, etc., we call your attention to our general line of men's and boys' raiment, hats and caps, underwear, and all sorts of furnishings, shoes, a great variety of all the different leathers. They're going up in price too, and the sooner you buy, the better. We especially call your attention to our very elegant line of men's shirts, ranging from 1.25 upwards. Of course you all understand that shirts have advanced, and if you do not understand, you might as well know now that they are going to advance still higher. Owing to the fact that we placed our orders so far in advance, our shirts are going to be fairly reasonable in price—exceedingly reasonable considering the condition of the cotton market.

MOUNT PLEASANT. Sept. 10.—Mrs. Steff of North Diamond street has received a letter from her son, Sergeant Fred Steff, of Company E, 110th Regiment, stating that it was his brother, Albert Steff, who was killed on July 30 and not him as had been officially reported by the government to his mother. TALK OF HIGH COST OF MEDICINE

"Although I paid only $2.00 for two bottles of May's Wonderful Remedy I wouldn't take $100 for what two doses have done for me. My partner also has taken a dose with wonderful results. He was threatened with an operation for stomach and bowel trouble and is sure he will be all right now. We both suffered from indigestion and bloating with gas." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and relieves the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Elton Harvey, aged 48 years, was killed at Bessemer while at his work on Saturday evening. He was a brakeman working on the Union railroad in the Bessemer yard. It is not known just how the accident happened. He was removed to the small hospital where he died in a half an hour.

Harvey was well known at Dawson and vicinity. He was for a number of years employed at Dickerson Run as a freight conductor, working out of Dickerson Run. A few years ago he moved to Glassport, taking a similar run out of there, after which he went to the Union railroad. He was married and lived at Glassport. He was married to a daughter of H. C. Wilhelm of Dickerson Run. He is survived by his wife and two children. The arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

LOCAL WAR NEWS

DELAWARE COLLEGE

In a letter from C. Ray Goodwin, who with eight other Connellsville boys are training at Delaware college, Newark, Del., to The Courier

he says he wishes to thank the members of Local Draft Board No. 2 for sending them to such a fine place.

He says he honestly believes that without exception they have the finest set of officers in the country.

"There are some 200 odd number in training and we are divided into three different sections, gas men, auto mechanics and machinists, and radio squad. All of our bunch belong to the former except John D.

Butler and John DeTempie. They have been assigned to the machinists.

Our barracks are in the state armory so we are pretty comfortable for sleeping.

"We are all well fed and have but-er for every meal, so no kick there.

In fact, there isn't any reason for anyone kicking about anything. We were vaccinated on Tuesday and are now expecting the 'shot in the arm.'

"We had our first real work today polishing the garage and the grounds surrounding. Quite a job should say. One of our boys had the misfortune of losing his pocketbook.

"About the most comic sights that has taken place was the line of march of all the boys clad in indigo overalls, heavy marching shoes and a fitme-quick hat, to mess. We had the whole town laughing. Our uniforms will be issued within a week's time.

"None of the fellows are homesick as yet but we are unanimous in saying nothing like dear old Connellsville."

"We have received two copies of

The Courier and they are appreciated as much as a letter from home.

The boys here are John DeTempie,

Frank Morrison, John Erdiegum,

Harry Griffin, Isaac Goodman, John D.

Butler, David Ritchey and George

Rudolph."

EDWARD O'CONNOR GLAD TO GIFT HIS COURTESIES.

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Connor of East Crawford avenue, Edward O'Connor of Company I, 15th Engineers, writes that he expects to be moved soon from Dordogne, France. The young solider is in the best of health and in his letter states that he had received several issues of The Courier.

"You

cannot imagine how much I appreciated them. For a time I thought I was at home." He writes.

WILL BRING FRENCH GIRL BACK WITH HIM.

On his return to the United States,

Oscar Hubant of the 147th Infantry

Band, Headquarters Company, will bring with him a little French girl as his bride, according to a letter received written to his brother, Henry Hubeau of the West Side. The letter states:

"Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and hope you are the same. Dear brother will tell you that I arrived in France O. K. and am having a fine time here. We all sleep in tents as they call them and now we are sleeping in barns. I believe that I will get out of the army I will be able to sleep on a cot.

I can sleep on anything. I get up every morning at 5:30 o'clock and without any person calling me. I play in the band and am interpreter for the company officers. They all treat us fine. I see a lot of the country but I do not think I will go to the front for a while. I am on the road from 5:30 A. M. to 9:30 P. M. I think when I get home I will bring back a nice little French girl. She is a dreamer and a fine worker around the house and as pretty as a picture. She is the kind of girl I admire. We can't get many cigarettes here and what we do get costs to "beat the band." They don't get very much to eat here and if I get a piece of bread extra that I don't use I give it to them when I pass along the streets. Women always call me and want me to come in and talk with them. They are not very happy.

PRIVATE L. V. AUER SEES LOCAL BOYS IN FRANCE.

Writing to his mother, Mrs. John Auer of Bullskin township, Private Lewis V. Auer states that he never was in better health and that he expects to be promoted soon as he made good marks shooting at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va. He lefts of a terrible hall storm in France, flattening the wheat and rye and injuries after the fruit crops at home. A part of the letter is as follows: "I wish to my health so perfectly that it seems a miracle."

"Yes sir, this Tanlac beats anything I have ever before used," declared P. P. Shively, a well-known salesman who lives at 1007 Third St., Juniata, Pa.

"I had no idea it was so good. Why, it has restored my health so perfectly that it seems a miracle than anything else."

MASCOT FRENCHIE WOUNDED

WHEN ROSES BLOOM IN FRANCE.
Throughout the breadth of sunny France again the roses blow, Entwining peasant's lowly cot and stately old chateau. They seem to bear a message to each waiting, watching heart. As we stand musing of our land uniting do the petals fall. For since our sons gave up their lives to stem the foe's advance Thrice have the roses bloomed within thy garden O fair France!

Our hands are clasped, dear wife, while France lies to ransom, look unfold A pledge of happier days to come; its fragrant chalice holds With faith renewed we turn to thee, O valiant Jacquemont! For every drop of French blood spilled blood red the bellies blow, We grieve to see the crimson heart and read the message plain: "Courage!" But yet a while and France comes to her own again!

So by the memory of those dauntless spirits gone before, We hold our heads invincible, our ardent love unspurned. We'll rout the foe with fire and sword, with bayonet and lance, God willing see the roses bloom again in sunny France!

MADE NO APPEAL TO HIM

Elder Scotsman Fled at Once When He Heard Prospective Wife Spoke "Three Tongues."

A parky old gentleman of Scottish persuasion, hearing rumors of the coming of a bachelor tax, fled him to a matrimonial agency, where a highly cultured dame presided.

"I'm after a wife," began the Scotsman, "a well-educated wunner, no over big. What ha'e ye on your books?"

"Let me see, sir," replied Mrs. Cupid, turning over the leaves of an impressive-looking ledger. "I have so many first-class eligible. Ah, here is a really superior lady on the sunny side of forty, good-looking, domesticated, musical and speaks three tongues." "Three tongues, did ye say, men? Oh, may I be guarded! Which is the nearest way out?"

From the Heart.

These little actions of every day which seem to give so little trouble to one person and so much happiness to another, are all the result of properly directed thought. We speak of the greatly enhanced spiritual value of a kind action which seemed to be performed spontaneously, but we shall find that organized and co-ordinated good thought lies at the back of it. And something—something engendered and nurtured those good thoughts.

Sometimes I wonder whether we do full justice when we refer to an act as being spontaneous; we do not in this way give full credit to the kind person for having developed such a disposition that kindness may be rendered without effort; that good-will springs always from the heart. We forget the innate kindness in applauding the act of the moment.—Exchange.

His Specialty.

"What is the good of such an inefficient officer as your village constable?" pensive demanded a guest. "When the fight occurred in front of the post office this morning; apparently everybody else in the community was present. But he did not get there until it was all over. If a crime were committed right before him what would he do?"

"If he couldn't possibly set away he would regard the perpetrators sternly, and I'll just bet you on it!" replied the landlord of the Petunia tavern.—Kansas City Star.

The Tramp's Bit.

A woman noted for her philanthropy was approached by a novel kind of beggar the other day. He wished money instead of a "handout."

"What is your great need of money right now?" she asked, her hand on her open purse. "Are you hungry or have you no place to sleep?"

"No, lady, it isn't that so much," he explained, "but I gotta do my bit buyin' Thrift stamps."

Sope to Cerberus.

A butcher's boy while on his way to deliver an order encountered a fierce dog which kept him pinned in a corner by his attack. Presently the woman of the house came to the lad's rescue and drove the dog away.

"Has he bitten you?" she asked.

"No," said the boy. "I kept him off by throwing him your cape, an' ye came just in time to save your roast."

The Kaiser as I Knew Him For Fourteen Years

By ARTHUR N. DAVIS, D. D. S.

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure News Syndicate)

A new German office girl whom I had engaged attracted the kaiser's attention, and he was gracious enough to shake hands with her. After he had left, the girl held out the hand the kaiser had grasped and said she wouldn't wash it for a week!

"Just to think, this hand has grasped the kaiser's hand! When I tell my family about it tonight they won't believe it!"

The fact that the kaiser condescended to acknowledge the plaudits of his people by a salute or wave of the hand was cited as proof of his graciousness and kindness; their god was smiling on them, and their gratification was overwhelming.

To maintain this state of veneration was one of the kaiser's principal concerns. That was why he never appeared in public except in full uniform; why he always rode at white's horse, while the rest of his staff rode dark ones; why the pictures of him that were allowed to be circulated always showed him to the very best advantage; why every case of lese majeste was punished with the utmost severity; why, in short, every possible precaution was taken that the exalted ideas which the public held regarding their kaiser should never be undermined.

With this spirit of devotion dominating the people generally, it was only to be expected that they should have stood solidly behind their emperor when he sought to achieve the one ambition of his life—his dream of world domination.

There is no doubt that the war was planned and made possible by the militarists and the Junkers, and that every effort was made to conceal from the people its real purpose and ultimate goal; but if anyone imagines that the people at large would have held back had they realized the truth, he fails to understand the underlying spirit of the Teutonic race.

The Germans are the most quarrelsome people in the world. It is misleading to speak of the German militarists. All Germans are militarists. The records of their civil courts tell the story. In 1913 there were no less than 5,000,000 petty cases tried in the courts, and in every case naturally involved at least two parties, the astonishing fact is disclosed that some 10,000,000 Germans, or one-seventh of the entire population, appealed to the courts in a single year!

The boisterous character of the people was evidenced in countless other ways. It was the natural result of what I believe to be the most pronounced national shortcoming—selfishness. The average German is the most selfish individual in the world. He thinks of himself and his own comfort first, last and all the time. I have noticed it on the street cars, in the theaters, in the public highways, in the restaurants and hotels, where people congregate. Every one looked out for himself first and pushed aside those who stood in his way. In civil life, just as in a state of war, the German practiced the principle that might makes right.

Chivalry, courtesy, magnanimity are as foreign to the German makeup as they are characteristics of the French. A keen desire to make something out of nothing is another national trait of the Germans, if my observation has been accurate. What is commonly referred to as German theft is only a polite name for German stinginess, and I have seen, so many illustrations of the petty meanness of the German people that it seems idle to specify single instances.

One of the first impressions I received about the German people, when I went to live among them fourteen years ago, was the lack of comradeship among them. Class distinctions are drawn so fine, and there are so many gradations, that it was almost impossible to find two Germans on the same social plane. One was always the other's superior. After my fourteen years' experience among these people, I cannot say that that early impression has been removed; if anything, it has been deepened.

Anyone who has lived in Berlin, and is familiar with conditions in other European capitals, will bear me out that the German policeman is the most arrogant police official in the world. His word is taken in court in preference to that of six civilians, and his power is such that it might very easily be used oppressively; but strangely enough, despite the cupidity of the German character, graft and corruption, among the German police and other officials were practically unknown before the war.

Such were the people behind the kaiser when the great war started. I shall never forget the sentiments expressed to me by private individuals in every walk of life as the various phases of the war developed.

No measure thus was taken by Germany, no matter how atrocious or inconsistent with the world's idea of what is permissible in civilized warfare ever brought a word of condemnation from the German public as a whole, although, of course, there were some notable exceptions. The great majority of Germans who discussed these matters with me, however, not only defended everything Germany did, but complained because more rigorous measures were not taken.

Merely by way of example, and not because her suggestion was any worse than hundreds of others raised by my German patients, I may mention the surprising viewpoint expressed by the Countess Sierstorff, a relative of Von Henckel-Donnersmarck. It was after Italy had joined the allies and when German resentment against that nation ran very high.

"What we should do at the very first available opportunity," she declared, "is to destroy every single work of art in Italy. Not a single one of their landmarks or art treasures should be left standing. Then when the war is over and Italy no longer derives the enormous revenue she has been collecting for years from tourists, she will be sorry for what she has done to Germany!"

Did the German people countenance the submarine warfare and the slaughter of innocent women and children, in defiance of all rules of international law and the dictates of common humanity? They had only one criticism to make of it—it was not comprehensive enough. It was absolute folly, if not a crime, they said, for Germany to prescribe safety lines for neutral vessels to use. The whole world should have been declared a war zone, that death and destruction might be dealt wherever and whenever the opportunity offered. Every ship that sailed should be sunk, and every American who ventured within range of a German gun on sea or land, should be shot. That was the universal sentiment.

The suggestion that a continuation of the submarine warfare would inevitably bring America into the war did not perturb the people in the slightest.

"How can America do us more harm than she is now doing?" they asked. "American bullets are shooting down our men, American food is sustaining our enemies. American dollars are working against us in every possible way. Let America come into the war and give us a chance to pay her back for what she has done to us. She couldn't harm us any more if she were a belligerent. Why allow her to remain neutral and go unscathed?"

The jubilation with which the news of the sinking of the Lusitania was received by the German people was general. It was so significant that I believe America would have declared war immediately had it been known. I have failed to find a single German who did not exult over the dastardly crime, and the activity of the Zeppelins in their raids on open towns evoked similar demonstrations.

That the views which the people held regarding the conduct of the war were strongly influenced by the public press, which was absolutely controlled by the government, was only to be expected. The fact that in peace time the press of Germany was perhaps the most reliable in the world, made of it a particularly valuable tool in the hands of the government in time of war.

The German newspaper is gospel to the people. The last word in any argument was always furnished by proof supplied by some newspaper article. "Es steht in der Zeitung!"—literally translated, "The paper says so," was always final and conclusive. Nothing the papers declared was too preposterous to be believed.

The press was used to excellent advantage to conceal reverses and to make the utmost capital out of successes. Right from the start the newspapers declared that Germany was fighting a defensive war; that the nations of the world had jumped on Germany's neck because they were jealous of her growing power.

The importance which the kaiser and his leaders placed in public opinion among the German people is clearly illustrated by the announcements they made and the measures they resorted to from time to time, for home consumption.

When in December, 1918, for instance, the kaiser realized that the resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare, which he had determined upon, might bring neutral nations into the war, he felt that it was necessary to do something to uphold the spirit of his people. It took the form of a proposal of peace to the allies.

This proposal was designed to accomplish two distinct purposes: First, it was to convince the German people that their kaiser was really the peace-loving monarch he had always professed to be; second, it was to demoralize the allies by dividing them against themselves.

This much is certain: The kaiser never intended the allies to accept the proposal he made. He admitted that much to me, as did also the Prince von Pless, his most intimate advisor. It was termed in such a way that the allies could not possibly accept it. But it served one of the purposes which it was intended to achieve, and nearly accomplished the other.

CHAPTER XVI.

Germany in Wartime.

While the German people have always been in thorough accord with the kaiser's ambitious project which is so significantly described by the popular slogan: "Deutsch und über alles!" when the great war, which was to achieve Germany's aims, commenced, it came almost as much as a surprise to the Germans as it was to the rest of the world. They knew it was inevitable and they looked forward eagerly to "Der Tag," but when it arrived the bustle and excitement, not to say panic, which developed throughout Germany was so pronounced that in some cases it approached the ludicrous.

Obviously the people were kept in ignorance of the plans of their war barons in order that hostilities might come as a complete surprise to them and give color to the government's contention that the war was forced upon Germany.

So little thought did we give to the complexities of the political situation that on Friday, July 31, 1914, my wife and I started off on a motor trip. We had heard so many rumors of war within the previous ten years that we saw no reason why an amicable solution should not again be found as it had always been before.

On our way out the Charlottenburger Chaussee we passed the kaiser and the kaiser driving to Berlin from Potsdam at about sixty miles an hour, and there were other indications of activity, but we attached little importance to them.

Merely by way of example, and not because her suggestion was any worse than hundreds of others raised by my German patients, I may mention the surprising viewpoint expressed by the Countess Sierstorff, a relative of Von ever, and saw thousands of tons of coal humped up between the railroad tracks which were ordinarily kept clear, we realized that preparations for war were being made in earnest and we stopped to consider whether it would not be better after all to return home. Such was our ignorance of war that we decided that, even though it were not advisable to motor in Belgium and France, where we were bound, we might safely plan a tour in the Black Forest in Germany.

We had left Berlin late in the afternoon. In the evening, when we arrived at Gotha, we found that the younger waiters in the restaurants and hotels had already left and that the older reserves expected a general call the next day.

The next morning we started for Frankfort. As we passed through villages after village, war preparations became more and more evident. Measures were being taken everywhere to arouse enthusiasm—young men gathered on school steps were singing patriotic songs, students were marching and speeches were being made in the market places.

About five o'clock that afternoon we arrived in Frankfort. The whole place was in a fever of excitement over the mobilization posters and their resentment against the French was being aroused by "extras" which were handed out without charge, announcing that the French had already dropped bombs on the railroad at Nuremberg and that French officers in autos had over-ridden the borders. The ridiculous statements about French flyers dropping bombs on the railroad at Nuremberg had not the slightest foundation, of course.

ERRORS LAID TO WRONG MEN

Muffs by Third Baseman Often Blamed on Man Throwing Ball—One Instance Cited.

To a man in the press box it seems there is too much of a disposition to give wild throws to players on almost anything that another player fails to hold, says Detroit Free Press.

Take a third baseman for instance. He is supposed to stop hard grounders and if he doesn't he will be charged with an error. Yet very often when a catcher or an outfielder hurls the ball to the third baseman and it gets away from him the error is charged to the man throwing the ball when in a matter of fact the third baseman should be penalized with a run.

It is too often taken for granted that a throw is bad because a baseman doesn't hold it. The Phils once had the greatest throwing third baseman in the world. He was spiteful and afraid to put the ball on the runner.

Cravath and Puskert would whip hard accurate throws straight to the third baseman, who would deliberately get out of the way, make a feeble stab, perhaps bat the ball off a little, and the outfielder would get an error that he didn't deserve. When this player was sent elsewhere, the fielding averages of Cravath and Puskert leaped forward.

"They're so good, we couldn't wait to put them out with the regular October Records—you can get them now," says a Columbia announcement of a small, but very select group of records of popular melodies which dealers are now showing.

Chief among this advance group are three rousing war song-records fresh from Broadway. "What Yankee Doodle Says Hell Do, Hell Do," is the title of one, and it is a title that fairly sings itself. A great bit of sentiment, superbly sung by the famous Peerless Quartette, with "Bobby the Bomber," by Byron Harlan, on the back. The latter is a catchy song-story of a baseball hurler who "put 'em over" the front line trenches.

When the Lambs held their annual Gambo in New York recently, the song that brought down that great audience of sophisticated actors and song-tarts was a wonderful new piece entitled, "A Rainbow from the U. S. A." Here it is, sung by Henry Busse and the Peerless Quartette, and backed up by another superbly war-song, cut through both sides of one of the best records of the rifles-and-drums ever recorded.

BASEBALL BAT SAME AS SIXTY YEARS AGO

Few Changes Have Been Made in Stick Used by Sluggers.

Originally Decreed That It Should Be Made of Wood Not More Than Two and One-Half Inches in Diameter and Round.

Baseball was referred to as bat ball in some communities in the early days of the national game. The modern baseball bat had its origin just 59 years ago.

March 9, 1859, at a meeting of the fathers of baseball held in New York, it was decreed that the bat should be made of wood and have a diameter not to exceed 3½ inches and a length not greater than 42 inches. In the years that have followed fewer changes have been made in the bat than in any other thing connected with the game. The provision as to length still stands, but since 1905 the swatter has been permitted to use a slightly thicker bat. The early rule that the bat be made of wood wasn't binding enough in the early days of professionalism, for some of the players sneaked in bats into which holes had been made and filled with lead.

The rule of 1859 prescribed that the bat should be round, and this provision is in effect today, although in the intervening years there have been some variations. In the early eighties a four-sided bat was introduced and was endorsed by the governing body of amateur players, but it didn't last long and was never used by professionals. Later in the same decade bats made of soft wood and flat on one side were introduced, to be used in bunting. This variety of bat gained the recognition of the National League, and was used in nearly all professional circuits up to 1896, when it was discarded and outlawed.

Prior to the adoption of the rule of 1859 any old kind of stick was permissible in baseball. Even flat bats were not barred and many star sluggers used implements of prodigious size. It takes a real man to wield a heavy bat, say one that is five feet long and five inches wide, but many of the old-timers did it. Those were the happy days for the "knockers," as batsmen were called in that period.

SHORTSTOP CATON IS CLASSE

Pirate Fans Are Loud in Praise of Diminutive Short Fielder—Is Dangerous Hitter.

In "Kid" Caton, their diminutive shortstop, the Pirates have an infighter of no little class, and Pittsburgh fans are loud in their praise of him. Caton, who was obtained from the Birmingham club of the Southern association last summer and who played in a few games toward the latter end of the 1917 National league campaign, is perhaps the smallest player in the major leagues. However, he has a lot of energy stored up in his compact frame, and he covers a wide range of territory in the short field. In addition, he is a dangerous hitter and seems destined to become a star in time.

Claude Davidson recently resigned from the Athletics because "baseball held no future for him." He has found his future, however, and is now playing shortstop for the Chester shipbuilding team.

UPS AND DOWNS OF SALARIES

Pitcher Caldwell of New York Yankees
Formerly Received $3,000,
Now Gets $4,000.

The ups and downs of baseball salaries are indicated in a petition filed in a New York court by Pitcher Ray Caldwell of the New York Yankees. When he was drawing a salary of $3,000 a season he had been ordered to pay his wife $250 a month alimony. Caldwell went into court, showed baseball was referred to as bat ball in some communities in the early days of the national game. The modern baseball bat had its origin just 59 years ago.

March 9, 1859, at a meeting of the fathers of baseball held in New York, it was decreed that the bat should be made of wood and have a diameter not to exceed 3½ inches and a length not greater than 42 inches. In the years that have followed fewer changes have been made in the bat than in any other thing connected with the game. The provision as to length still stands, but since 1905 the swatter has been permitted to use a slightly thicker bat. The early rule that the bat be made of wood wasn't binding enough in the early days of professionalism, for some of the players sneaked in bats into which holes had been made and filled with lead.

The rule of 1859 prescribed that the bat should be round, and this provision is in effect today, although in the intervening years there have been some variations. In the early eighties a four-sided bat was introduced and was endorsed by the governing body of amateur players, but it didn't last long and was never used by professionals. Later in the same decade bats made of soft wood and flat on one side were introduced, to be used in bunting. This variety of bat gained the recognition of the National League, and was used in nearly all professional circuits up to 1896, when it was discarded and outlawed.

Prior to the adoption of the rule of 1859 any old kind of stick was permissible in baseball. Even flat bats were not barred and many star sluggers used implements of prodigious size. It takes a real man to wield a heavy bat, say one that is five feet long and five inches wide, but many of the old-timers did it. Those were the happy days for the "knockers," as batsmen were called in that period.

Paul Smith, former International League outfielder, who was denied a chance with the Boston Red Sox this year because of the draft, is shining as an athlete in army field darts. In a recent meet at Camp Dodge, in which scores of crack army athletes took part, Smith won the running high jump and was a close contender in several other events. He also has been starring as a member of a Camp Dodge baseball team. One of his teammates is Fred Beck, former major and minor leaguer. Smith is in a machine-gun battalion and expects to be in France soon.

TY COBB SAYS HE WILL QUIT GAME THIS SEASON.

Peter Maher and Kid Broad, old-time boxers, once walked into a restaurant for dinner, according to a story told us. Maher ordered a mess of fish.

"Why the fish, Peter?" asked Kid Broad. "This isn't Friday; it's Tuesday."

Maher regarded his friend with a smile. "Why, haven't you ever heard that fish was brain food?" he inquired. "The more fish you eat the more brains you'll have."

Broad gave more careful attention to the bill of fare. "Too bad they haven't whale today, Pete," he said. "You ought to get a lot of good out of a big slab of whale."

Air Plants.

In some parts of Mexico "air plants" abound. These curious growths are never attached to the soil in any way, but rely for their moisture on the atmosphere. One kind, known as "Spaniard's Beard" (Tillandsia usneoides), attaches itself to telephone wires. Very often the growth becomes a positive nuisance, and it is necessary to send men to clear it away. The "Spaniard's Beard" has no proper leaves, and in appearance is simply a mass of green gray threads.

Painting a Pine Floor.

Deck paint is the technical name of the paint that was used on a white pine floor. Three coats were given, and as it contained considerable oil, it dried overnight. When the last coat was thoroughly dry it was treated like a hardwood floor with a coat of floor wax. This protected the paint and made the floor easier to take care of.
